Results of the poll: HIW LIVE

By Dr. Holger Flick

I just wanted to give brief feedback on the results of the poll from the beginning of this month. It has become very much clear looking at the results that there is little interest in LIVE HIW seminars with the opportunity to ask questions.

Three facts about the results

- First, as both LinkedIn and Twitter report the number of reads and interactions to authors, I have a pretty good understanding how many people read the post and had the opportunity to participate.
- Second, less than 1% decided to participate. That gives me a pretty good indication of how big or how little interest there is in LIVE seminars.
- Finally, of the people particpating, almost half would only be interested if it was offered for free. This would require looking for sponsors for every single event.

Conclusion

In conclusion, this feedback has led me to believe that the Delphi community rather prefers content that is pre-recorded and can be studied at their own pace with their own schedule in mind.

A big thank you to the developers who participated.

Free to read. Not free to make.

Every tutorial, article, and line of example code on Holger's Code is published without a paywall and without ads. This page is about what keeps it that way.

Professional work, published free

The content here is held to the same standard as professional client work: every tutorial is built as a real project, tested against current versions, documented step by step, and revisited when the frameworks move on. A single in-depth tutorial routinely takes days — and that's before the bills behind it: servers, storage, build infrastructure, licenses, and the hardware everything is verified on.

If an article or tutorial here has saved you an afternoon of debugging, taught you a technique, or helped you ship, it created real value for you. Supporting it isn't charity — it's paying for professional work you found useful, at whatever price you choose. And if you can't, keep reading anyway. That's what the free part means.
